

IN THE UNITED STATES PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE

In re application of:)
)
) Art Unit: 2892
Osamu Nakamura)
) Examiner: Hoai V. Pham Patent No.: 7,554,117)
) Confirmation No.: 7733 Issue Date: June 30, 2009)
)
Serial No.: 10/809,118)
)
Filed: March 25, 2004)
)
For: SEMICONDUCTOR DEVICE AND) MANUFACTURING METHOD THEREOF)
)
)

Office of Petitions
Commissioner for Patents
P.O. Box 1450
Alexandria, VA 22313-1450

REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION OF DECISION DISMISSING REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION OF PATENT TERM ADJUSTMENT

In the Decision Dismissing Request for Reconsideration of Patent Term Adjustment ("Decision") dated November 18, 2009, the United States Patent and Trademark Office ("Office") dismissed Patentee's Request For Reconsideration Of The Patent Term Adjustment ("Request") filed on August 14, 2009 in the above patent. In the decision, the Office did not follow Patentee's request to apply the rule set forth in Wyeth v. Dudas, 580 F. Supp. 2d 138 (D.D.C. 2008) with respect to the calculation of "overlap" of "Type A Delays" and "Type B Delays." The legal issue concerning the calculation of such "overlap" is identical to the legal issue decided by Wyeth. Following the Wyeth precedent would result in a total Patent Term Adjustment (PTA) calculation of 1,328 days, for the reasons detailed in Patentee's Request of August 14, 2009.

The Office acknowledged that Patentee requested recalculation of PTA according to the rule set forth in Wyeth. Decision at page 2. However, that acknowledgement was the sole mention of the Wyeth case in the entire Decision. Most of the Decision puts forth the Office's support for a legal argument that had been considered and rejected by the court in Wyeth. The Office's arguments appear to be presented anew in the Decision as though the Wyeth case has no relevance to the present PTA calculation.

The statute governing PTA instructs a patentee dissatisfied with a determination made by the Director to pursue a civil action against the Director in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. 35 USC § 154(b)(4)(A). The statute makes clear that the District Court for the District of Columbia is the sole court with jurisdiction to hear such PTA challenges. It was under this statutory provision that Wyeth brought its action against the Director and prevailed on the exact same legal issue that is in contention for the present patent. However, and despite the previous adverse ruling on this legal issue, the Office in the present Decision has ignored the clear ruling of the only district court with authority to consider PTA challenges.

Because the identical legal issue of the present PTA challenge has already been decided by the only district court with authority to consider PTA challenges, Patentee submits that the Office should either follow the law as interpreted by that court or stay a final decision in this matter until the ongoing appeal of the Wyeth decision has been decided by an appellate court. Subsequent to the Wyeth decision, numerous patentees have filed suits in the District Court for the District of Columbia challenging PTA calculations based on the same legal issue presented in Wyeth. Because the District Court for the District of Columbia has already decided the issue and the Office has appealed that decision to the Federal Circuit, the Office and the plaintiffs have requested stays of most or all of those litigations pending the outcome of that appeal. Fairness dictates that the Office act in a consistent manner during the present administrative process. Given its current legal posture, it would be fundamentally unfair for the Office to render a final ruling on this issue when its interpretation of the statute and rules have been rejected by the court and it is currently seeking to have that adverse ruling reversed on appeal.

The Decision states that "Patentee's calculation of the period of overlap is inconsistent with the Office's interpretation of this provision [of 35 USC § 154(b)(2)(A)]." Decision at page 2. However, as noted above, the district court with sole jurisdiction to hear PTA challenges has squarely rejected the Office's interpretation of this statutory provision. "While deference is to be given to an agency's interpretation of the statute it administers [citations omitted], it is the courts that have the final word on matters of statutory interpretation." Ithaca College v. NLRB, 623 F.2d 224, 228 (2d Cir. 1980) (citing inter alia Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. (1 Cranch) 137, 177, 2 L.Ed. 60 (1803)). By comparison to the Office's apparent disregard for the precedent of the District Court for the District of Columbia in calculating PTA for the present patent, the National Labor Relations Board has been admonished for its practice of refusing to follow unfavorable decisions from the courts in instances where it was likely that a case at issue would come up for review before the very court with which the Board disagrees.

Of course, we do not expect the Board or any other litigant to rejoice in all the opinions of this Court. When it disagrees in a particular case, it should seek review in the Supreme Court. During the interim before it has sought review or while review is still pending, it would be reasonable for the Board to stay its proceedings in another case that arguably falls within the precedent of the first one. However, the Board cannot, as it did here, choose to ignore the decision as if it had no force or effect. Absent reversal, that decision is the law which the Board must follow. The Board cites no contrary authority except its own consistent practice of refusing to follow the law of the circuit unless it coincides with the Board's views. This is intolerable if the rule of law is to prevail.

Id. Similarly, absent a reversal by the Federal Circuit or the Supreme Court, the Office cannot act in a manner that ignores the Wyeth decision as if it had no force or effect.

Patentee requests that the Office follow the legal authority of Wyeth and increase total PTA for the present patent to 1,328 days (for the same reasons detailed in the Request of August 14, 2009). If the Office is unwilling to follow the ruling in Wyeth while the appeal of that decision is ongoing, then it should at a minimum follow the rationale it has put forth recently in PTA litigations pending before the District Court for the District of Columbia and Patentee requests that the Office stay a final decision on this matter until the Wyeth appeal has been completed. It is the courts, and not the Office, that must have the final word on this matter of statutory interpretation.

No fee is believe due. However, if any fee is due, please charge it to Deposit Account No. 50-1039, referencing Attorney Docket Number 0553-0404.

Respectfully submitted,

Date: December 3, 2009

By:

Mark J. Murphy
Registration No.: 34,225
Cook Alex Ltd.
200 W. Adams Street, Suite 2850
Chicago, IL 60606
Phone: 312-236-8500
Fax: 312-236-8176